

Swedish National Data Service (SND)

is a research infrastructure that promotes increased open access to research data.

Together with a network of Swedish universities and research institutes SND supports researchers in making data available for reuse.

What we do

SND makes it easy to find, use, and cite research data from a variety of scientific disciplines.

SND supports and trains researchers and data professionals in research data management.

SND works for scientific openness and contributes to making research more accessible, useful, and transparent.
